Run report for run 2223 – Pash’s Antarctic Winter Run

With inclement weather and pending snowstorms Pash had abandon his scheduled On On site at Vostok Station and moved around the corner to his cosy garage. His trusty fire pot radiating at the garage door was enough to keep the ice storm at bay. Unfortunately this warmth did not extend to tonight’s trail. Pash exhibited a sample of the signage he had erected earlier to delineate the track. These consisted of postcard sized placards with an arrow <--- and “HHH. THIS. WAY.” As in recent weeks this signage was illegally attached to Aurora assets, namely their power poles, with the arrow pointing in the direction of the trail – how simple – what could possibly go wrong? “It’s only a short run because it was too cold to go too far” said Hare Pash. Off went LH3’s hardiest hashers in the direction of Hobart Road. Plenty of signage marked the run as is zigzagged to 5ways. A check; the search had cause to go by Rickshaws house where he could be seen trough the window sip-ping cocoa and toasting marshmallows – soft cock! Pash’s signs had been designed and produced in a little sweat shop in Beijing and being generic the arrows all pointed the same way. Variations of direction on the trail were achieved by placing the sign on the back or the font of the pole or a much less successful method that Pash used was to pin the sign upside down. Upside down meant that the arrow pointed in the desired direction but the writing was upside down and given that this was attached to the pole with a single thumb tack also meant that the sign could easily be spun on this axis so the arrow could point anywhere. Now I’m not one to accuse fellow hashers of misdoings, however it did look as if the trail had been interfered with and the signs had been molested, especially when some were pointing at each other and others were pointing to the heavens. Perhaps wind gusts had loosened the thumb tack or school children had used the arrow for a perverse version on spin the bottle but more than likely it was sabotage by some within. Given Pash’s earlier instructions it wasn’t difficult to guess where the trail led and by ignoring the defiled signage travelled through 6ways, Punchbowl, into the edge of King Meadows where Pash’s final sign said “ON. HOME. TWO. COLD.” (sic)

Some ogling ambulance chasers went home via the unfortunate property that was unroofed in an earlier squall – even more unfortunate that the property was later looted as well. A good short run to suit the conditions set by Pash.

ON ON:

As mentioned earlier only the toughest hashers here tonight to appreciate the warmth of Pash's hospitality and his fire wood. Tiles finally recited the ditty that he had been threatening and some other class jokes were shared.

On Downs:

Pash downed for Hare duty.

Sheila for having a fine looking photo in the social pages of the local rag.
