Run report for run 2225 – ABBA Ya Ya Ya Ya Run

[illegible]

Once again these wise words from the Swedish FW could be interpreted as – I am so busy with football tipping, landscaping and advising government on the national and international economy that I didn't have time to set my usual marathon so I used this dribble dropper to distribute stolen out of code baby formula on the trail starting up the hill at the Primary School; there are no checks or on backs and it is a short run.

The reluctant pack rugged up and set off. Sure enough there was the trail of baby formula that had been dispensed in neat little piles. It wasn't long before the neat little piles were dissolving in the storm water and began to resemble streaks of seagull shit. Pushing onwards towards Laura Street things went from bad to worse with the trail markings now blending perfectly with the lichen growth, decayed dog shit and even more bird droppings. Giving up on the ABBA trail there was a group decision to make live trail past the LGH, Sporties, and Brickfields then back up the hill on home. On this route the pack did happen upon some of the original trail that had been sheltered from the weather but who gives a rat's clacker in this wind and rain?

ABBA should be commended for his effort in tailoring the run to suit the inclement conditions regardless of it being useless and a complete shemozzle.

ON ON:

Optimistic ABBA has the trailer and on-on set up some distance from his garage. This is quickly remedied and the trailer is repositioned at the doorway to allow both shelter within and easy access to the beer tap. Hash Cash and Goblets most superb raffle ticket selling were all but done when the call went out to draw the raffle before Sprocket and Blakey arrived; alas the call was too late as they emerged down the driveway.

Q. ABBA, where's the fire pot on such a miserable night?

A. Ya ya ya ya ya ya ya ya ya ya ya ya ya ya back ya ya ya ya ya ya ya ya ya ya ya ya ya ya wet ya ya ya ya..

Interpretation ....who knows? But no fire pot or any form of thermal intensification was to be felt all night.

New runner Garry and Boong showed their culinary skill by cooking up the TuTuTuTu leftovers including the potatoes, sadly Goblets most excellent salads were absent.
